

Cragwood Country House Hotel & Restaurant

HOTEL INFORMATION

Dear Guest,

May I take this opportunity to welcome you to the Cragwood Country House Hotel. Whether you are visiting us for a special occasion, work or a simple get away I hope you have a pleasant and memorable experience.

The remainder of this document provides general information about the hotel; its history and the various services we offer.

Should you be stuck for an activity during your stay you can find plenty of ideas from the leaflets available in the lounge by reception.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to ask a member of staff or myself.

Kind Regards,

Albert Waldon, Hotel Manager

Welcome to the
Cragwood
Country House Hotel

HOUSEKEEPING

Housekeeping may service your room whilst you are at breakfast.

Should you prefer them not to enter your room please display the "do not disturb" sign on your door handle.

A LITTLE PIECE OF HISTORY

Cragwood was originally designed and built in 1910 for William Warburton. The son of a corn merchant, William trained as a lawyer and ran a practice in Manchester. The architect was Frank Brookhouse Dunkerley, whose mother was William's cousin. The Dunkerleys also lived in Bowdon and used William as their family solicitor.

For a long time, it was thought that Cragwood was built for a Lancashire industrialist called Albert Warburton, and a piece of evidence for this was a stone over the entrance bearing the inscription "A W 1910". However, a notice in a 1909 edition of The British Architect states, that the house was commissioned by W Warburton Esq and the 1911 census shows William and Amy in residence, so the initials probably stand for "Amy and William".

The house is built from stone quarried in its own grounds and these quarries, which are now a feature of the water gardens, also provided the stone for the famous round house on Belle Isle and many of the houses on the opposite shore of the lake.

Many of Cragwood's original features have been retained and lovingly restored including beautiful wood panelling, ornate plaster work on the ceiling and magnificent fireplaces.

The Edwardian Gardens, landscaped at the turn of the century by Thomas Mawson, lead down to the shore of Lake Windermere where we have half a mile of lake frontage.

Scattered across the shore, both above and below the water-line, are the curious "Inscribed Rocks of Windermere" on which the recluse John Longmire carved the names of his heroes and enthusiasms in stone. They range from political messages about the Corn Laws and the National Debt, to the names of famous writers and Windermere oarsmen.

Sink into a sofa at the end of your day in the comfortable lounges or relax with a drink in bar whilst enjoying the stunning views of Lake Windermere, all cosy in winter with their crackling log fires.
